Assault suspect jailed when mom brings him in

A mother's attempt to clear her son's name ended in his arrest on charges of sexual assault and home invasion, Detroit police said.

DeAndre Mullins, 29, was arrested Saturday after his mother saw video surveillance aired on TV newscasts showing him trying to break into a home, police said.

Mullins was arraigned Monday in Detroit's 36th District Court on multiple counts of first-degree criminal sexual conduct and home invasion. He was allowed no bond.

He is accused of breaking into his victims' homes during the early morning and sexually assaulting them while threatening them with a weapon. The incidents were between Oct. 27 and Dec. 30.

The mother brought Mullins to the department's Northeastern District to clear him. Instead, three victims identified Mullins as the perpetrator, police said.

A preliminary exam is set for Jan. 18.
